Two UBS employees overseeing roughly $1 billion in client assets have left the firm and created Requisite Capital Management. It will be led by Douglas John, a former managing director at UBS, and Bryn Basiardanes Talkington, a former regional director of UBS Asset Management. The new Texas-based firm has also partnered with FallLine Securities, which provides technology, broker/dealer and other wealth management services. Last week, another prominent UBS group left the b/d to join Dynasty Financial Partners.
